Russellville's History

Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto is said to have explored the area that became Russellville in 1541 and found the Osage Indians living here on what was later called the Chactas Prairie. The land was part of a Cherokee Reservation between 1818 and 1828.

Formal education came to the Russellville area early with the founding of nearby Dwight Mission in 1820. The Russellville Public School District was formed in 1870, and in 1910, the Second District Agricultural School, now Arkansas Tech University, opened its doors.

P.C. Holledger became the first white settler in the River Valley by building the first house in 1834. Dr. Thomas Russell, a well-respected doctor and surgeon, purchased the house in 1835. The Chamber staff feels a deep sense of history and commitment to our city because the first house built in Russellville and the home of the town's namesake was on the site where the Chamber of Commerce now stands.

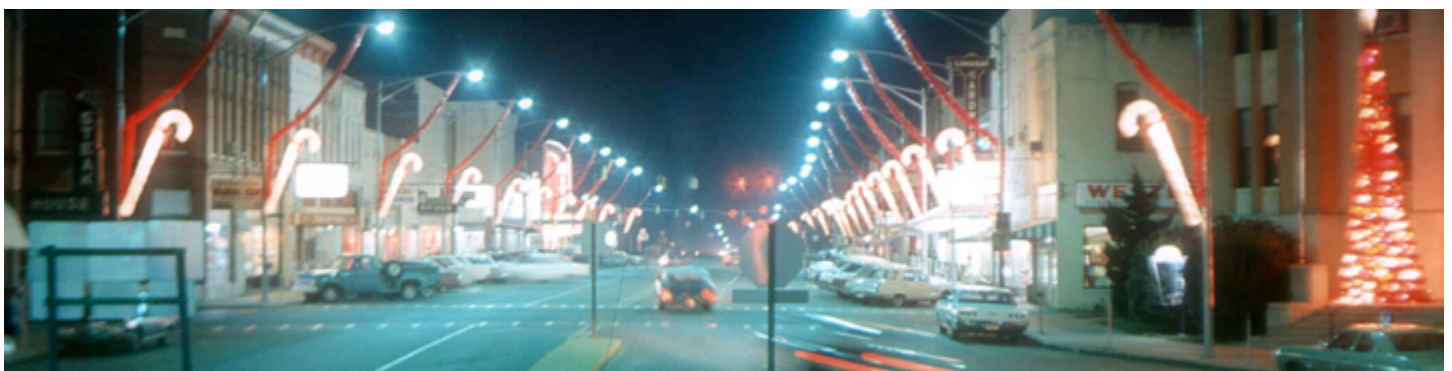

The first business established in Russellville was built by James and Silas Shinn. The brick building their nephew Jacob Shinn built to replace their wooden store still stands at the corner of West Main Street and South Denver Avenue.

The City of Russellville was incorporated on June 7, 1870 and grew with the construction of the Little Rock and Fort Smith Railroad. In 1887, the county seat was moved to Russellville from Dover. By the end of the century, Russellville and the surrounding area had become a prosperous coal-mining area, with the Ouita Coal Company being the first established. Cotton became a profitable crop near Russellville; in the early twentieth century, bales were sold from wagons in the middle of Main Street.

From 1940 to the 1970s, the Latimore Tourist Home served African Americans as the only available overnight accommodations between Little Rock and Fort Smith. The home offered short-term accommodations for many who worked on the railroad, and then for travelers as it was in the 1949 Green Book. Constructed around the turn of the century, the home was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 2012.

With the construction of Interstate 40 in 1956 and the completion of Dardanelle Lock and Dam in 1965, Russellville saw another economic boom. The dam also led to the creation of Lake Dardanelle which is now a major draw for tourists, campers, hikers, and fishermen alike.

The Arkansas River is the site of many unique events in Russellville's history, but the story of the Arkansas Traveler is one that has molded Arkansas Folklore for years. The story featured in the folk song and the Edward Washbourne painting is said to have taken place on the banks of the Arkansas River near what is now Lake Dardanelle State Park.

Our heritage has served us well as Russellville has continued to prosper and attract business and residents from all over the world. It is easy to see why Russellville has become the trade center for the River Valley. Even in the early days, when Russellville's population was less than two thousand inhabitants, there were several industries. Some of these were the Melrose Cotton Mill, a gristmill, a planning mill, a cotton gin, and a wool-carding mill. There was also a wagon and plow factory that had a capacity of four hundred wagons a year, a canning and evaporation plant, and a large foundry and machine shop. The proud tradition of industry continues today as Russellville supports a nuclear power plant, poultry processing plants, automobile parts manufacturing, frozen foods, and many others.

As Russellville's economy grows, the selection of housing is keeping pace. New developments in and beyond city limits compliment established neighborhoods that surround the central business district in Pope County. Russellville's older neighborhoods exhibit a sense of the community's past. Many have been kept in pristine condition, while others have been renovated to fit the needs of the twenty-first century. Established neighborhoods offer a variety in price, architecture and activities. Downtown Russellville continues its revival as historic buildings are renovated into uses that serve a contemporary lifestyle. Just to the south of Main Street and west of Arkansas Avenue lies one of Russellville's oldest neighborhoods. The tree lined streets frame an eclectic mix of architecture from every era of Russellville's history. The housing market in Pope County is advantageous in two areas: median home age and median home cost.

- The median home age in Pope County is almost ten years younger than the national average
- The median home cost is almost half of the national average.

Arts & Entertainment

If you are looking for a little culture or just some old-fashioned family entertainment, Russellville has it all. Many organizations host a number of events and festivals throughout the year to provide residents with something to do without the long drive. Activities include something for everyone from art exhibits to concerts to fishing tournaments and theatre.

The Center for the Arts stands prominently at the front of Russellville High School and has welcomed thousands of visitors since its opening in 2012. The 130,000 square foot facility was a dream of Russellville School District to have a performing arts center to expand educational and cultural resources for students and the community. With a 1,875 seat performance space, the multi-purpose Center is home to district events including band and choir concerts, theatrical and musical productions, art shows as well as various other school related programs. The Center is also ideal for individuals, organizations and performers seeking a venue for graduation ceremonies, business meetings, music concerts, dance recitals, workshops and other events.

The River Valley Arts Center sponsors art exhibits, concerts and plays and other cultural activities. The Arts Center has a gallery with new exhibits monthly. Admittance is free to the public. Annual shows include Collegiate Competition open to any college student in the state, a statewide High School Competition, and local artist exhibit. Other exhibits are from area, state and nationally renowned artists. The Arts Center produces a summer musical and fall play featuring local talent. Another summer program offered by the Arts Center is Summer Arts Camps. Through this program, children enjoy a day camp setting, immersed in a variety of art forms led by artists.

Downtown Russellville has become a hub for the local art scene. There are multiple artists galleries and studios downtown, as well as several venues for local bands to play including Old Bank Sports Grill, Depot Park, and The Cavern.

During the Summer Months, Main Street Russellville's Downtown at Sundown Concert Series has proven to be very popular! Local and Regional musicians perform at Depot Park on the last Saturday of each of the summer months, and local business provide refreshments. It's free admission, and always a good night!

Russellville Downtown businesses extend their business hours on the First Friday in March, June September and December to host area artists and musicians for the Downtown Art Walks. Since 2005 this event has been a collaboration between the Russellville Downtown Association, a committee of Main Street Russellville and the Arkansas River Valley Arts Center.

Over 2019 and 2020, several murals sprang up in the River Valley, three of which were commissioned by the Russellville Regional Leadership Academy. Murals are located at Exit 78, Russellville City Park, Downtown Russellville, and at Lake Dardanelle State Park. Arkansas Tech University Artist-in-Residence Tiffany Black completed a community mural now on campus at ATU, and a mural for River Valley Food 4 Kids.

Local Industry

Russellville is the home to fifty major manufacturing facilities, including divisions of ten Fortune 500 companies. Industries such as Bridgestone/Firestone, Tyson Foods, ConAgra Foods, International Paper and Olin Corporation all thrive in Russellville. The diversification of these and other industries provide Russellville's greatest asset – a quality labor force built around a strong nucleus of skilled laborers, technicians, and administrative personnel.

Manufacturers in the River Valley produce aluminum foil, aircraft components, electronics, numerous food products, metal fabrication, automotive parts, paper products, plastics, and even nuclear power. Arkansas Nuclear One, located along the banks of the Arkansas River just outside of Russellville, is the only nuclear power plant in Arkansas.

Over 11, 000 people are currently employed by 50 manufacturers in the area. Some of the largest manufacturing employers in the area include ConAgra Foods, Tyson Foods, and Arkansas Nuclear One.

The Russellville Regional Economic Development Alliance is a public/private organization whose mission is to recruit new industry to the area and to create and maintain the perfect environment for existing industry to grow and prosper. The organization is made up of members representing industry, businesses, individuals and government. The cities of Russellville, Pottsville, Dover, and Dardanelle, and the counties of Pope and Yell are all members of the Alliance.

The Russellville Regional Workforce Cabinet is working to assist our industries in finding qualified employees. The most important competitive economic issue has been and will continue to be workforce. A business's ability to find enough workers with the skills needed is the difference between success and failure. Prior to the pandemic, record low unemployment had diminished the available labor pool and acted as a throttle to additional business growth. In the coming years, these workforce challenges and how communities address them, will likely be the difference between places that grow and prosper and those that do not.

Striving to Turn Your Financial Dreams Into Reality

Transportation

Russellville and the Arkansas River Valley area is blessed by being connected to a nationwide transportation network involving all modes of transportation including interstate, federal, and state highways; coast to coast rail service and a short-line railroad; the year around, ice-free Arkansas River; a municipal airport; and a high speed data transmission network that is second to no other city in the world.

Interstate 40, a main east/west highway corridor that traverses the nation, passes through Russellville. Four Russellville exits provide convenient access to the entire network of local highways.

U.S. Highway 64 and State Highways, 7, 124, 247, 331, and 326 make up an area network of highways allowing motorist numerous routes to destinations such as Hot Springs National Park, the beautiful Ozark and Ouachita Mountains, and the entertainment capital of Branson, Missouri.

Travelers love to drive Scenic State Highway 7, the first “scenic” designated state highway in Arkansas. From Russellville, Scenic 7 takes drivers on a beautiful trip through the Ouachita Mountains to the south and through the Ozark Mountains and the Buffalo National River to the north.

Several industries take advantage of the area rail network to ship products worldwide. The Union-Pacific Railroad’s east/west main line passes through Russellville and the River Valley. This rail line provides rail service to ports in all areas of the United States.

Russellville also has the added advantage of a short-line railroad. The Dardanelle and Russellville Railroad (D&R RR) is a five mile long short-line railroad that connects directly to the Union-Pacific Railroad in Russellville. The D&R RR was originally constructed in 1883 to provide a way to deliver goods from the Arkansas River to what is now Russellville and the Union-Pacific Railroad. Today, the D&R RR serves numerous industries and the Port of Dardanelle on the Arkansas River.

The Port of Dardanelle, located on the Arkansas River between Russellville and Dardanelle and served by State Highway 7 and the D&R RR, offers transfer and storage (both general warehousing and grain storage) and provides automatic loading and unloading capabilities. The Port is served by several barge lines carrying commodities such as bauxite, grain, chemicals, fertilizer, steel, rubber, wood and paper products, and stone.

The Russellville Municipal Airport boasts a 5,500 foot runway that is 75 feet wide. Non-directional beacon and GPS approaches allow aircraft operation in inclement weather with cloud ceilings to as low as 275 feet. The airport can accommodate up to the largest general aviation business aircraft. A maintenance facility, aviation gasoline and jet-A fuels, a reception area, and conference room are available. The airport is staffed during most daylight hours (7:30 to 6:30 in the summer). After hours service is available with prior arrangement.

Russellville is located midway between two commercial airports with full instrument landing systems (ILS) and airline service. Little Rock National Airport is about 80 miles to the southeast and the Fort Smith airport is 80 miles to the west. Both are accessible via Interstate 40.
